Permanent Link to Taoglas launches RF filter division for IoT, mobile apps
2021/03/28

Taoglas is launching a new RF Filter division specifically developed for Internet of Things (IoT) and mobile applications. Taoglas, a provider of IoT and M2M antenna products, made the announcement at at Mobile World Congress Americas this week. Taoglas aims to provide high-quality, small-form-factor, cost-effective and easy-to-implement RF filters. The new filter division will feature a range of off-the-shelf filters for a variety of applications, including filters for emerging license-free bands used for IoT, L1/L2 and L1/L5 GNSS applications. Taoglas can also work with customers to develop custom filter solutions. "Today's mobile and IoT applications require high-performance RF filters, in a form factor and cost that makes sense for our customers," said Dermot O'Shea, co-CEO at Taoglas. "We've seen the frustrations our own engineers have had in quickly sourcing reliable components for active antenna and electronic designs. Taoglas is eliminating that frustration with its own filter division, applying the same principles for success that we've demonstrated with our antenna business." The filters are manufactured in Taoglas' purpose-built production facilities in Taiwan, and shipped immediately anywhere worldwide. Support is available from any Taoglas location globally. Filters are available through regular Taoglas sales and distribution channels.
